BIG PROFITS Small Investments

Returning prosperity will make many rich, but nowhere can they make so much within a short time as by successful Speculation in Grain, Provisions and Stock.

$10.00 FOR EACH DOLLAR INVESTED can be made by our Systematic Plan of Speculation originated by us. All successful speculators operate on a regular system.

It is a well-known fact that there are thousands of men in all parts of the United States who, by systematic trading through Chicago brokers, make large amounts every year, ranging from a few thousand dollars for the man who invests a hundred or two hundred dollars up to $50,000 to $100,000 or more by those who invest a few thousand.

It is also a fact that those who make the largest profits from comparatively small investments on this plan are persons who live away from Chicago and invest through brokers who thoroughly understand systematic trading.

Our plan does not risk the whole amount invested on any trade, but covers both sides, so that whether the market rises or falls it brings a steady profit that piles up enormously in a short time.

WRITE FOR CONVINCING PROOFS. Also our Manual on successful speculation and our Daily Market Report, full of money-making pointers. ALL FREE. Our Manual explains margin trading fully. Highest references in regard to our astounding success.

DINING IN PALESTINE.

Knives and Forks Being Unknown, the Fingers Do Valiant Duty.

A very large circular tray of tinned copper, placed on a coarse wooden stool about a foot high, served as a table. In the centre of this stood another big tray, with a mountain of pilaff, covered with the brilliant and glistening and upon it. This was the centre of the banquet. Although there were other smaller dishes, both meat and vegetable. Ten persons sat around the table, or rather squat.

The End of a Historic Jail.

The supervisors of Ontario county have just sold at auction the historic old jail of that county, the property bringing $100, and the bidder being obliged to remove it. This jail was widely celebrated in its day because of the so called "Morgan cell" therein. In which, previous to his mysterious disappearance in 1826, Morgan, the author of a book purporting to reveal the secrets of Freemasonry, was placed for protection. After his disappearance Morgan was never heard of again, and it was charged that the Masons had made way with him, some holding that he was drowned in the Niagara River above the falls, and another story being that he was banished to Australia, never to return on pain of death. The only thing that was ever proved was that he disappeared as effectually as though the ground had opened to swallow him.

This incident was widely discussed, and it aroused fierce animosities and bitterness at the time. It entered into politics, and the late Thurlow Weel and others utilized it to the political advantage. The phrase "good enough Morgan till after election" dates back to this anti-Mason agitation period of 70 years ago. Western New York especially, the home of Morgan, was a hot-bed of anti-Masonry, and the records of Genesee commandery, No. 14, K. T., one of the oldest in the state, now located at Lockport, but then at Batavia, relate how on St. John's day the parade of Sir Knights was stoned by the people. Whole counties were carried to the anti-Mason issue in those days.—Albany Argus.

Minard's Linctum is the Best.

though there were other smaller dis... both meat and vegetable. Ten persons sat around the table, or rather squatted on the carpet, with their knees drawn up close to the bodies. Each had before him a plate of tinned copper and a wooden spoon, which some used without the plate. Most, however, preferred to use the fingers of the left hand, several dipping their hands together into the dish as the disciples did at the Last Supper.

As soon as anyone had finished he rose and went into another room, to have water poured over his hands to wash them, and the vacant place at the table was instantly filled by a newcomer. The bread, I may say, was laid on the mat under the tray, so as to be easily reached; and a jar of water the only beverage used during the meal stood within reach. Besides rice, stews of beans or cracked wheat, with thick soup or sauce poured over them in the great central bowl, are also in fashion. Spoons, though sometimes provided, are often wanting—pieces of thin bread, doubled, serving instead. Knives and forks are unknown; and as there is no special dining-room, there is no furniture suited for one. Hence tables and chairs are never seen. The meat being always cut up into small pieces, there is no need for a knife, and chickens can easily be torn asunder with the hands. So far, indeed, are Orientals from thinking it strange to dip their fingers into the common dish, that it is a special act of politeness to grope in it for the visitor, and lay nice morsels before him, or even to insist on putting them into his mouth.

Bees That Make Bad Honey.

"Lovers of the product of the busy bee will find it a wise precaution to have their honey tested as to its purity before they eat it, or use it in a culinary way." Prof. Remington gave a warning or something like this at a recent meeting of pharmacists, and at the same time told of a German who was extensively engaged in bee culture, and who had his apiary close to a sugar refinery. A lot of rank molasses was accessible to the bees, and they gorged themselves on it. The result was their honey was equally rank and unfit for use. On another occasion the bees fed on blooming digitalis, and their honey proved to be poisonous. Natural honey, therefore, is liable to vary very much, and occasionally, when it looks best and is sweetest, it may be loaded with poison. Unscrupulous bee-farmers are accustomed to forcing their bees to increase their output by feeding them sweetened water. The honey, of course, is scarcely fit for use.

Bacteriology of the Sea.

Dr. B. Fischer, bacteriologist of the 1894 Plankton expedition, in his report on the "Microbes of the Sea," says that microbes capable of a germination are everywhere to be found in a water except at great depths. They are more numerous in the Canary, Florida and Labrador currents than they are in either the Guinea or equatorial currents. They were not detected with certainty in the ooze of the ocean's bed, but were abundant at all depths shallower than 1,300, and some were found at a depth of 3,500 feet. Like the bacteria of the different diseases, those of the ocean are found in all shapes and forms, the spiral predominating. Nearly all were found provided with hooks or suckers, and one large family are reported as being phosphorescent.

REDUCED TO A SHADOW.

Saved by Strawberry Extract.

GENTLEMEN.—Feeling it my duty to give you an unolicited testimony for the direct benefit I have received is my family from the use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, let me say that while we reside at Fenwick, Ont., my little daughter had an attack of Dysentery or Bloody Flux, by which she was reduced to a mere shadow and became quite helpless. Fortunately my family physician advised the use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and we neither had nor knew of anything better for this dreadful disease, and therefore we gave it an impartial trial. I am happy to say that less than a quarter of a bottle caused the flow of blood and mucus to cease, and the child grew rapidly recovered. We always have had Extract of Strawberry in the house since to be ready for emergencies common to children in summer from the effects of fruit, etc. I would just soon that of losing my wild Strawberry, as being deprived of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. This is a testimony of thanks for the untold good my little family have received from this great remedy.

Laid at Rest.
FUNERAL OF A. L. MORDEN, Q. C.
After reaching Edinburgh in safety Mr. Morden complained of a pain in the chest and side. A physician was called in who pronounced the disease to be pleurisy, saying also that the action of the heart was bad; but if this regulated the sufferer would rally. On Sunday, July 14th, a turn for the worse was noticeable, and grave doubts were entertained as to a recovery. Death took place that night, and a sincere christian passed away to "that bourne from whence no traveller returns."
Friend after friend departs.
Who hath not lost a friend,
There is no union here of hearts
That finds not here an end.
"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain."
According to an expressed wish the remains of A. L. Morden, Esq., were brought to Napanee for interment. The body was therefore first placed in a shell casket, draped, then enclosed in a metallic casket, hermetically sealed. Thus prepared all that was mortal of the deceased was placed in a heavy, plain oaken casket, ornamented with brass fittings.
All preparations having been made the grief stricken party sailed from Liverpool on Saturday, the 20th, at 1.30 p.m., per S. S. Lake Ontario, of the Beaver line. The steamer was sighted at Father Point on Sunday morning, and the sad party arrived at Montreal on Tuesday, where Mr. Symington was waiting. On arrival at Napanee on Wednesday, the remains were taken to Mr. Symington's house, being reposed thence to the church on Thursday morning.

pathy and condolence, and earnestly pray that she and her husband may be sustained by the grace and presence of God in this hour of their sore trial and bereavement. Signed—The Teachers Meeting.
The flag on the town hall, court house and collegiate institute were flying at half mast during the week.
The rooms of Napanee Lodge 86, I.O.O.F., were appropriately draped in black, with motto over the N. G. chair. "A Departed Brother." Mr. Morden was a Past Grand Master of Grand Lodge of Ontario.
The various stores and places of business in town were closed from half past one until the funeral was over.
Mr. J. S. Hullett took an excellent photograph of the decorations in the Western Methodist church placed for the late A. L. Morden's funeral, including the coffin and the floral offerings. The picture is now on exhibition in Mr. Hullett's show window, and is coming in for much favorable comment.

THE FAMILY A SOCIAL CENTER.
Its Members, When Together, Should Avoid Unpleasant Topics.
"I do not know why members of a family, whenever they are left alone, should settle down to talking about dismal family topics," says Mr. Woodberry, in "The Errant Wooing," and the readers wonder with him. When the family is left alone the tendency is to resolve itself into a critical body, a committee of ways and means, or an executive committee. It is only in a rare instance that the impersonal, outside matters that would lead and control the conversation of a body of friends control the family conversation, and are valuable as when the family is alone. We take it for granted, even between mothers and daughters and fathers and sons, that the fact of blood relation makes exchanges of courtesy, approval,

NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY

CENTREVILLE.
Times are dull at present. Everybody is busy harvesting and report a favorable crop.
A runaway from town last week. Mr. Reuben Milligan's horses took fright and broke loose in front of Mr. Hinch's store and almost broke the waggon to atoms.
Mrs. D. Kennedy's little baby boy took a very bad turn on Tuesday of last week which nearly proved fatal but is now recovering.
A meeting of the agricultural and institute members was held in Kennedy's hotel on the 27th inst. Everything was satisfactory.
Our show will be held in Centreville on September the 28th this year and as the track is well fitted a good turnout is expected.

BELL ROCK.
We had a heavy rain on Saturday.
The hay crop is about harvested. It is not quite up to the average in this section. Some of our farmer's sold their hogs to Bicknell at $4.25 per cwt. He will ship them to-day from Enterprise.
Quite a number from here attended the show in Kingston.
Mr. Fred Clark surprised the people of Bellrock by bringing home a wife last week.
There was a very good attendance at church yesterday. Rev. Mr. Meredith preached a good sermon from John XIX, 18th verse.
Visitors: Mrs. Joseph Wheeler and daughter, of Tweed, at T. B. Wheeler's returned home on Saturday accompanied by Minnie Wheeler. Mr. and Mrs. Hannah York, of Tamworth, at Stewart Percy's. E. W. York and family at Tamworth. Louise Turpah at A. Perault's.

Consumptives, cheer up! You are not going to die, if you will but take Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, "the kind that cures" coughs, colds, bronchitis and all pulmonary diseases. Every bottle warranted. No oily taste like others. In big bottles, 50c and $1.00, at druggists.

GULL CREEK.
We have had great rains recently. Early Tuesday morning it rained very heavy, with heavy thunder and lightning. The grain that stood out in the shock on the fields, and the hay in the coops must be greatly soaked. A few weeks past the cry was for rain, but now it is the reverse with many.
It seems that the vicinity of Gull Creek is coming to be a noted place of resort, parties from Tamworth and Centreville spent a few days merry time here last week. Welcome friends, we like to see your faces gleaming with your usual smiles with the enjoyment of having a good time.
Mr. Chas. Whalen has been cutting his hay, but it is still in the coops, and laying about. Too bad that it was not stacked before this heavy rain.
The men in Rathbun's drive have returned. It is evident that they have got it through at last, because the dam on Clare River has been opened and the water has had its natural course. For this many here are glad as it will help the marshes to harden up that the people may go and cut the hay on them. Hay is likely to be scarce around here next winter. Corn and potatoes and late crops have improved greatly since the recent rains.
The Rev. Mr. Rice, Tamworth, is announced to preach at our school house next Sunday at 2.30 p.m.
Window Screens, Screen doors, spring hinges, screen wire, largest variety, lowest prices. BOYLE & SON.
DENBIGH.
Owing to frequent showers of rain lately crop of grain very much injured, but our hay crop is without exception the lightest ever grown in this part of the country and all the wild grass on every available marsh for miles around has been

NEW AND TERRIBLE.

ANOTHER HORRIBLE FIGHTING PIECE FOR USE IN WAR.

Powder, Gun and Projectile Which Combined Could Destroy a Ship at a Range of 10 Miles—To be Used on Men-of-War or for Coast-Defense Purposes.

A gun that can sink a big ship at 10 miles range is worth keeping out of the way of. Maxim, the gunmaker, and Dr. Schupphaus, the gunpowder expert, have just invented a new cannon and torpedo powder which will knock all modern war vessels to pieces like egg-shells. This big gun will throw a huge cannon ball full of explosives 10 miles and where it strikes it will smash into kindling wood everything within hundreds of feet. In fact, this new terror doesn't even have to hit a warship to do this. If the shot lands in the water near by it will sink the ship and stun everybody on board from the force of the explosion. At any rate, these are the things claimed for this veritable engine of destruction.

The special powder employed is almost pure gun-cotton, compounded with such a small per cent. of nitro-glycerine as to possess none of the disadvantages of nitro-glycerine powders, and preserved from decomposition through a slight admixture of urea. It is perfectly safe to handle, and can be beaten with a heavy hammer on an anvil without exploding.

The secret of its remarkable power lies in a simple mathematical truth which no one had previously thought of. High explosive powder is now loaded into cannon in the form of strips, small cubes or solid cylindrical rods from one-half to three-fourths of an inch in diameter, several feet in length, and looking like a bundle of sticks of dark wax. When the powder is touched off the ends and circumference of each rod of powder ignite instantaneously and burn towards the centre.

The volume of gases generated by combustion grows constantly less, because the burning surface is less, and as it is the volume of gas which gives velocity to the projectile shot from the gun, a loss of velocity is the inevitable result. The projectile does not go so far as it would if the pressure of the gases had increased, or had at least been maintained.

In each piece of the Maxim-Schupphaus powder is a lot of small holes running through the entire length of the rod. When the powder is ignited the flame spreads instantaneously, not only over the circumference of each rod, but throughout the perforations as well. These little holes are burnt out with such rapidity that the difference in the volume of explosive gases generated at the beginning and at the end of the bore of the gun is about in the ratio of 16 to 1.

This new death-dealing powder has been fired in field guns and in the heavy coast-defense rifles at Sandy Hook with surprising results. From a 10-inch gun, loaded with 128 pounds of this powder, a projectile weighing 571 pounds was thrown eight miles out to sea.

To test by a large gun the actual destructive work of this new powder would be impossible in a civilized community. The force of the high explosive thrown would be too great. It would be necessary to withdraw to the Great Sahara Desert, the wilds of Siberia or some equally unfrequented locality in order to see just what would happen if 50 pounds of explosive should hit some Maxim-Schupphaus projectile. The projectile will be a 20-inch gun especially adapted for coast defense. This gun will show some peculiarities. It will not be built up that is composed of many

A last tribute to respect to Mr. A. L. Morden, even if it were twice its present size, for so large a concourse of people gathered in town that no building here could have accommodated them. The two lodges of Oddfellows met in the rooms of Napanee Lodge No. 86 and augmented by representatives from Belleville, Picton, Kingston, Deseronto and other places walked in procession to the church, and thence to the cemetery; as did also the town council which met in the council chamber. While the church was filling Mr. Jewell played "Nearer my God to Thee," and the opening hymn was 855, "Servant of God, well done." Rev. Stratton, of Selby, offered up a touching prayer, followed by a very impressive anthem sung by the choir of the church. Rev. McDiarmid read the 90th psalm. Hymn 851 was next sung, "Unveil thy bosom faithful tomb." Rev. Dr. Carman, general superintendent of the Methodist church, here delivered a very impressive and appropriate address, taking as a foundation, Psalm 39, v. 4, "Lord, make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know frail I am," and Psalm 90, v. 12, "So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." The rev. gentlemen enlarged on these words with burning eloquence, and after alluding to the late Mr. Morden as "pre-eminently a man," closed an affecting oration with the words "a man beloved of us all, precious in our memory." Dr. Dyer, Rev. J. P. Wilson, and Mr. Crossley spoke in highly eulogistic terms of the life of the deceased, especially of his faithfulness in connection with the Western church. Hymn 784, "Abide with me, fast falls the eventide," was then sung, and the procession to the cemetery was formed up outside, the various representative bodies preceding the hearse, and a very long line of vehicles containing representative citizens and friends from the country following. On reaching the cemetery the burial service of the church was read, and the body of an esteemed citizen, trusted friend and loving relative, was consigned to its last resting place.

The pall-bearers were Messrs. Deroche, Rutan, English, S. C. Warner, Preston and Madden, brethren of the legal profession; Messrs. Hall and Fralick of the High School Board, of which Mr. Morden was for some time a much respected member.

Floral offerings and tributes of affection were numerous, and were tastefully arranged around the coffin in the church.

Among the gifts were: a floral pillow by the Grand Lodge of Oddfellows; an anchor, wreath, and three links, by the Sabbath School teachers; a floral heart, by Mr. Morden's Sunday School class; a floral circle, by Mr. G. F. Rutan; a floral cross, by Mrs. Tilly; a floral pillow, by Lodge 86, Napanee; a wreath by Mrs. Chas. Stevens. Flowers and vines were also presented by Mrs. Wilkison, Jno. Gibbard, the Official Board of the church and many others.

The Western Methodist church was draped and decorated by the S. S. teachers.

The following expression of sorrow, sympathy and condolence was ordered by the regular Teachers Meeting of the Western Methodist church on Monday evening July 22nd.

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God in His wise providence, to remove by death our dear brother and fellow worker A. L. Morden Q. C., a man greatly beloved and trusted amongst us, a true and loyal son of the church, and faithful man of God. Therefore be it resolved that while we bow humbly and without complaint to the will of God in the removal of our brother, we cannot refrain from expressing our deep sorrow and sense of personal loss at his death. And we are pained because we shall see his face and hear his voice no more.

We recognize that in him we have lost a true and faithful yoke-fellow in the work of the church and Sabbath school. One who could always be depended upon and who was ever ready to help forward the cause of God in every possible way.

We shall greatly miss him in every department of Sabbath school work, his place cannot easily be filled. But we shall long remember his kind and gentle spirit, his sincere reverence for the word and house of God, and his deep and true piety. These have left an impress on our minds and hearts not soon to be forgotten.

"Peaceful be his silent slumbers Peaceful in his grave so low.
He no more shall join our numbers
He no more our songs shall know
Yet again we hope to meet him
When the days of life are fled,
Up in heaven with joy to greet him
Where no farewell tears are shed."

To our sister and co-worker Mrs. Symington we extend our deepest and truest symmothers and daughters and fathers and sons, that the fact of blood relation makes exchanges of courtesy, approval, encouragement and common interest obligatory. The family circle should never be a stage for the display of bad manners, ill temper and lack of self-control. One sometimes hears it said that it is the duty of the mother to create this atmosphere of sociability in the home. It is a common duty. Family life is a conglomerate, a many-sided crystal, and to be perfect it needs the contribution of good temper, good manners, and sympathy from the members in their relations towards each other and toward the family as a whole. Watch any family where there is a common intellectual interest—a family spoken of as a musical family, for instance—and see how the mutual relations differ from those of the family where each member has separate and individual interests apart from the others. Character commands as much respect from the individual members of a family as it does from the world at large.

What we need in the hurry and rush of to-day more than anything else is family life in its perfection, and that we can have only when each member of a family contributes his or her share towards its beauty, peace and intellectual development. Family life should be the social centre for each member of that family, the place where each can bring his friends with freedom, and the place where his friend will receive a ready welcome from all because of the friendship existing between him and a member of that family. While all may not be able to find the same bond of sympathy or the same common interest because the stranger is the friend of one, he should be received sympathetically by all. Life is more than meat, and the body is more than raiment, but too often the family life seems to accept the two facts of food and raiment and exclude all others, and where this is done one always finds the elements of unrest, dissatisfaction, criticism and lack of sympathy.—The Outlook.

THE FARMER'S COLLEGE.

The Dairy School, which last winter had an attendance of 109 students, and the new Veterinary College, which will adjoin the Dairy School and be opened next October, are pre-eminently the farmers' colleges of Eastern Ontario. Three of the teachers in the Veterinary College are professors in Queen's University, and farmers sending their sons to this college will know that the teaching will be as good as that given to the regular students of the university. Young men intending to farm or engage in stock breeding should spend a winter or two at the Veterinary College, Kingston, so as to qualify themselves for being veterinary surgeons or for scientific stock raising and stock breeding.

CENTREVILLE.

The rains of Saturday and Monday have proved very beneficial to vegetation and on the whole the yield will not be so bad as was at first anticipated. Oats and peas are said to be a better crop than they were last year.

A meeting of the directors of the township fair was held here on Saturday for the purpose of arranging prize lists, appointing judges, etc. The fair will be held on Sept. 28th. In addition to the prizes mentioned on list a couple of special prizes will also be given, one trotting and one for running. Every effort will be put forth in order to make it a success.

Several parties from here have been camping at Beaver Lake.

Women in Business.

There are few occupations in which women outnumber men. The women teachers outnumber the men nearly three to one, and the same is true of boarding house keepers. The disparity is still greater, of course, among nurses, laundresses and laundresses, housekeepers and stewards, seamstresses and servants. The total number of servants in the country is 1,025,000, of whom only 237,000 are males. Women take the lead numerically in typewriting, in dress-making, millinery, flower-making, box-making, as cotton mill operatives, in silk mills, in making corsets and buttons and hosiery.

The best advertisement. Many thousands of unsolicited letters have reached the manufacturers of Scott's Emulsion from those cured through its use, of Consumption and Scrofulous diseases. None can speak so confidently of its merits as those who have tested it.

will be a great gun representing a single shot for coast defense. This gun will show some peculiarities. It will not be built up, that is, composed of many pieces of steel bound together, but will consist of a single thin steel tube about 30 feet long, with walls not over two inches in thickness. In marked contrast with the mortars whose walls are made eight or ten inches thick in order to resist the pressure of the discharge. The recoil of the gun will be offset by hydraulic buffers underneath containing water and oil.

When the gun is fired some of this water and oil will be displaced by the shock and it will rise into the side chambers. The entrance of the water and oil into the chambers will so compress the air in them that on the cessation of the recoil the air will force the water and oil back into their buffers and the gun will again be in position for firing. On account of the simplicity of its construction and the lightness of its walls this gun will not be expensive to build.

A 20-inch gun of this type, using the new powder, could be planted at the entrance of New York harbor, either in Fort Washington or Fort Wadsworth and command the entire sea for a radius of ten miles. So uniform are the pressures and velocities obtained, says the New York World, that a wonderful accuracy of fire is possible. It would only be necessary to train the gun upon any ship sighted by the range.

capable of any exertion and with an ever present tired and despondent feeling life seemed hardly worth the living. Medicines that I took did not do any good; it was a case

thousands more for just such work than would be necessary under a proper tender system.

Mr. Haggart, as Minister of Railways, explained that all such money was expended upon an Order-in-Council, which of course means that it was given to the favorite Government organs and was divided between Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec, the chief organs in those Provinces being thus liberally subsidised in this round about way, and the people paying the shot. The jobs thus handed out, ostensibly for this railway work alone,
amounted last year to nearly a round fifty thousand dollars. The Halifax Herald is the principal government organ in the maritime Provinces, and, as usual, it got the lion's share. No party job has been too bad for it to defend. We never knew that it made a wry face in swallowing the worst of these cases. Its share of this favorite work last year amounted to $6,111.
The Yarmouth Times, a small town weekly, published in the remote corner of the province, got $1,173. But then, it did all that it could to prevent the election of Mr. Flint, who has been a strong government opponent.

The two favorites among the New Brunswick organs have been the St.
John Sun, which received $10,292 and the Moncton Times $14,473. The counties in which both these papers are published are represented in the Commons by staunch supporters of the Government, and of course the Sun and the Times are faithful supporters of these gentlemen.

Quebec does not fare so well. Its papers have claims that are not overlooked by those who have access to the public purse, but their pay comes from other directions than through Intercolonial railway printing. The Quebec Chronicle got $2,306 in this direction.

These are not the only journals, however, who get good advantages from that railway source. Pap was scattered with a liberal hand for some years by those who had the giving out of these railway jobs. We remember one little patent first side weekly, published a hundred miles from Halifax station, and many miles from any railway at all, that received regular Government pay for publishing the Intercolonial time-table of Halifax station.
Other out-of-the-way sheets were similarly favored. Of course they all were reliable advocates of "the old policy."
They realized there were substantial advantages—to them, at least—in it.

Here are some interesting facts,
gleaned from the Auditor-General's reports, regarding the pap given to newspaper favorites of the Government during the last eight years. They, in part, account for the fact that the Finance Minister finds it impossible any more to "restore an equilibrium" between public receipts and public expenditure. They also serve to account for the fact that certain newspapers are convinced at all times and in all seasons that "the country is prosperous" and that "the old policy" is just the one needed to ensure prosperity.
Of course they have their own personal experience to convince them of all this.
It is doubtful if these same organs would prove so "prosperous" under any other "policy."

The total sums paid newspapers for printing and advertising were as follows: In 1887, $303,199.09. In 1888, $326,928.74; in 1889, $243,716.84; in 1890, $182,447.25; in 1891, $275,821.11
in 1892, $236,975.20; in 1893, $231, 939.97; in 1894, $269,626.20. Totals for 8 years, $2,070,654.80. Average per year, $258,832.

All this, too, in the face of the fact that an Official Gazette, for the publication of all important Government notices is published weekly, at a very large public expense and that a Government printing office has been estab-

BRITAIN'S NEW PREMIER.

Lord Salisbury's Third Call to Office as Prime Minister—The Head of the Cecil Family.

Lord Salisbury's summons from Queen Victoria to form a new Ministry to succeed that of Lord Rosebery, makes him for the third time Prime Minister of Great Britain. He succeeded Gladstone in June, 1885, but was turned out of office in February, 1886. Gladstone had a very brief season of power, for the faction now known as the Liberal-Unionists deserted him, and Salisbury became Premier again in August. Salis-bury's second Ministry lasted until August, 1892. He carried on a vigorous foreign policy and opposed Home Rule.
Three years ago the Irish issue became too much for him, and Gladstone exchanged places with him once more.
Catastrophe proved too much for the Grand Old Man, and he resigned office in March, 1894. Lord Rosebery succeeded him, but has not had what could be called a very good time. Rosebery's Administration has not been remarkable for any settled policy; it has been on the retreat most of the time, and it was probably with relief that its leader resigned office on June 22.

Robert Arthur Talbot Gascoyne Cecil, Marquis of Salisbury, is the head of the old historic family of Cecil. Queen Elizabeth's Lord Burley belonged to this family. One of the Cecil characteristics is a bitter tongue, and Lord Salisbury possesses it. He was a younger son, and began life as a colonist beneath the Southern Cross. Then his elder brother died, and his plans of life were changed. He assumed the title of Lord Cranborne, took a prominent part in Parliament as a debater, became a member of several Cabinets, entered the House of Lords on the death of his father, and when Disraeli died became leader of the Conservatives. He is strong and domineering and there is nothing of the trickster in his nature.

Trees and Health.

It has been noted that the first settlers in heavily-wooded sections of the country have generally been healthy, despite their many privations. The reason for this is that trees and plants of all kinds possess the power of absorbing poisoned air from decaying vegetation, besides which the exhalations from evergreens and the smoke from burning resinous woods are noted for the relief they give to those suffering from pulmonary diseases.

New heavily-wooded countries, as already noted, are the most healthy for settlers, and they continue so for some years, as only a small portion of the forest can be cleared away each year.
After the forest is removed and sunlight is admitted, the soil fills rapidly with vegetable mold, which decomposes more rapidly than it can be absorbed by the scant vegetation, and as a result the atmosphere is rendered impure and malaria becomes a common complaint. In view of these facts, people are beginning to understand the value of trees as disease absorbing and health-giving agents. Naturally, this leads to the question as to what trees are best for protection against disease.

On Long Island and in New Jersey
there are localities surrounded and hemmed in with pitch pines, which are famed for their curative qualities in consumption, and the pines are thus indicated as valuable surroundings in pulmonary complaints. It would seem reasonable to suppose that trees having the largest leaves and the most of them would be the best for this purpose, as such trees would undoubtedly have the most absorbing power. We have seen the eucalyptus tree mentioned as of special value as a purifier of the atmosphere.

Linon for Liners.

There are no laundries on board ship;
they take up too much room. So the chief steward lays in thousands of pillow slips, sheets and towels. These come on board tied up in bales of a dozen each, and are stored in the linen locker, a cubbyhole of a place, on the main deck; the ventilator pipes from the engine room run through it and keep it hot.

There is no danger of linen getting mildewed there. The linen which has been used is thrown into another room provided with the same atmosphere, and is kept thoroughly dry. Where

The Salina (Kan.) girl who tele-

hand when she gets him.

Emily Faithful combined her work for the cause of women with a love for strong cigars, of which she was an inveterfirst to relieve her asthma.

The fact that 62 literary women sat down to dinner together in London recently is viewed by a leader writer for an English daily as ominous and portentous to the future of man in literature.

loon-tired "safety." The Duchess of Connaught, being yet a learner, prefers to take her daily practice for the present in the secluded walks of Buckingham Palace gardens. Meanwhile the Marchioness of Londonderry, Lady Brassey and the Princess Henry of Pless rank among the most graceful and expert of riders.

Alphonse Daudet was not complimentary in his references to English women. "Not only is she not handsome in features," he says, "but there is nothing seductive in her physical form, and, moreover, she is an utter stranger to elegance and good taste."
The Englishwoman whom you encounter in Paris, with her flattened-down hair and huge feet, differs in no single particular from the English lady of rank whom you meet in salons, on the turf and at the play. It gave me a real thrill of pleasure on reaching Paris to behold our pretty Parisiennes, with their fascinating toilets."

THE BRIDAL GARTERS.

Good Luck in Matrimony Follows the Girl Who Makes Them.

At all times garters have been considered very important details of woman's dress, and always associated in some manner with matrimony. Down through half a dozen centuries comes to us the custom practised to-day of having the garters as a finishing touch to a bride's toilet. The particular girl friend who is permitted to slip them into place is considered to stand the best possible chance of wedding happily before twelve months are out.

A prospect of near and blissful matrimony is also shared by the friend who secures the privilege of making a bride's garters, the proper pattern for which is now a circle of white silk elastic covered with embroidered white satin and clasped by a small gold buckle enamelled in white bow knots.
The garters of Marie Antoinette were pretty pink silk bands elaborately embrodered on the upper half in tiny jewels and gold thread. In an American family are preserved the bridal garters of a titled English ancestress. These are of white silk, nearly two inches broad, and decorated with round buttons made of seed pearls, from which suspend pearl cords and tassels two inches long.—Philadelphia Times.

BADGES OF MATRIMONY.

American Women are the Only Ones Who do not Wear Distinctive Insignia.

Americans are the only women in the world who do not exhibit some sign of matrimony. Of course, those who follow in the wake of European etiquette would not appear with their daughters wearing a hat without strings, but the universal American woman buys what she likes, regardless of whether it be matronly or not, and, what is worse, her daughters will select articles of dress only suitable to married women.

The Napanee Express

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, AUG. 1, 1895

THE PAP-FED ORGANS

The Intercolonial railway, which extends across the Maritime Provinces, is a Dominion Government railway. That fact represents a serious loss of tens of thousands yearly to the general tax-payers, but it appears to represent a very important item of profit to favorite Government newspaper offices, in the matter of advertising and job printing. Recently in the House, Mr. Flint, M. P. for Yarmouth, N. S. brought up the question about how this railway printing patronage was served out. Of course it turned out that though the work amounts to thousands of dollars every year, no tenders for such printing are asked for. Of course too, all the fat jobs are served out to those papers who most strongly defend the old party and the old policy, through thick and thin. That is just the way Government pap is usually served out to the party organs, no matter which of the old parties happens to have the lading out of the pap for the time being. That is the very reason why the tax-payers are, every year, being compelled to pay many ernment printing office has been established and maintained at great public cost to do the official printing.

The people's money is being thus handed out with a lavish hand and the party organs are being thus rewarded for faithful and dutiful services rendered.

Here are the sums paid to nine favorite organs for printing and advertising during the eight years mentioned. They are specimen bricks of the whole corrupt structure:

* * *

The Mail and Empire we have grouped together. The Mail was the recognized government organ during 1887, 1888 and 1889, and then during those three years got Government patronage to the amount of $26,547.16. Then came the period of its independence, when it became more popular and widely circulated than ever before, but its usefulness was gone as a party donkey-engine and its average of nearly nine thousand a year was at once entirely cut off,—clearly indicating how these Government jobs are given out solely in consideration of party services rendered.

The Empire was then established, and among its well known shareholders and officers were the old Chieftain, and a number of leading M.P.'s in the Government party ranks. It only got $14,595.36, or some three thousand a year, but it was a heavy drain on its Government party stock holders from start to finish, and was therefore again amalgamated with the Mail. What the two thus united, will get from the Government chest will be a matter of much interest to the tax-payers in the years to come.

The Montreal Gazette has had among its leading shareholders and editorial managers during the time thus covered two of the White family. One of them was a member of the government at the time of his death. The other is now in the front ranks of the Government supporters in the House and an expectant of a fat Government office, as soon as his services can be dispensed with there. It is well understood that the office of Collector of Customs at Montreal has been kept dangling before him for sessions past. It is the best paying office at the disposal of the Department.

How many members of the Government and their faithful supporters in Parliament both in the Commons and Senate, are stock-holders and managers in the other favorite organs we do not pretend to know. It would not surprise us, however, if the list is large.

These facts go to show how "public opinion" is being manufactured, and how much it really represents as expressed by these organs. They go to show, too, how it is our public expenditure keeps mounting up beyond the ability of the people to meet it:—Farmer's Sun.

and is kept thoroughly dry. Where there are clean napkins every day, frequent changes of statemore linen and an everlasting replenishment of towel racks, the demands upon the linen locker are very extensive.

A liner like the New Yorks puts to sea with about 9,000 serviettes, 1,000 towels, 6,000 or 7,000 sheets, 8,000 pillow slips and about 1,000 table cloths. Most of these find their way to the soiled linen locker in the course of the voyage. When the vessel arrives they are carted off to a laundry.—Tit-Bits.

* Dr. Patton on the Bible.

A few ultra conservative Presbyterians are startled and alarmed at a recent utterance of Dr. Patton, who has always been looked upon as one of the most able of all the conservative leaders in the church. In speaking of the Bible he said: "The great question of our time is simply this, What is the Bible? There are two ways of dealing with this question—one is the ecclesiastical way! one is the way of scholarship. It is the prerogative of the court of last resort to say whether this or that utterance does or does not contravene our confessional statements regarding inspiration. The church in her judicial capacity cannot settle the great debate upon this question. She cannot stop it. The debate is going on and will go on, and it must be in the hands of men who have special aptitude for the work.—New York Tribune.

COOKING ON A TABLE.

The Kitchen Range can be Entirely Dispensed With Hereafter.

Electricity has worked changes as great in the kitchen as anywhere else. Below are shown two views of the latest methods of cooking. All operations of cooking except baking are performed on a moderate-sized table and the oven for baking is shown in the second cut. On the table in the first cut are an electric griddle, for which great efficiency and cleanness are claimed; frying pans and chafing dishes, a plate warmer, broilers and stewers.

To show the efficiency of the outfit and to prove how far-reaching the general introduction of cooking by electricity would be, a company of a dozen friends was invited to a dinner of six courses, which was cooked in the dining-room of the host by the lady of the house, with the help of a butler, the entire preparation consuming less than an hour and a half, during which time the lady found time to converse with her guests and superintend the setting of the table besides. It must certainly be admitted that while taking up very little space, and insuring absolute cleanness, this way of cooking is superior to the old way in many respects. The total absence of heat in the room where the cooking is done cannot be praised too much, as every housewife will testify with pleasure.

of certain localities. The married women of Little Russia are always seen, even in the hottest weather, with a thick cloth of dark hue twisted about their heads. In New Guinea a young woman lets her hair hang about her shoulders, but when she is married this is cut short. Chinese matrons braid their hair like a helmet. In Wadal the wives color their lips by tattooing them with the thorns of the acacia and rubbing them with iron filings; in parts of Africa the married women perforate the outer edges of their ears and their lips and stick rows of grass stalks in them, and among a certain Mongolian tribe of people, the Manthes, the women wear suspended from their hair a little basket full of cotton, to which a spindle is attached. Thus in every country, savage and civilized, but our own, there is a sign or symbol of some kind that distinguishes the matron from the spinster.

England Has a Community of Empires.

England leads the world in acuteness in finding out the better portions of the earth that are attainable and in her enterprise and energy in possessing herself of them. She has, quietly as it were, but apparently successfully, laid the foundation for another vast empire in Africa. It extends from the Cape of Good Hope to Lake Tanganyika and is as large as all Europe. Besides her valuable gold mines there, coal and iron have also been found in large quantities, and civilization is advancing in that region as rapidly as it did in California after the gold discoveries, so it is said. England is truly a wonderful nation. In comparison with what she has done in spreading her influence throughout the world, civilizing and leaving her impress on it and accumulating wealth, the achievements of Rome are almost commonplace. What is thus said of the empire of the Caesars might also be said in like comparison of England with the other nationalities, ancient and modern. While Russia, as the most conspicuous in the number, is a vast empire and alike impressive in its area and population, it has exerted very little influence outside of its own domain; not a tithe of what England has. England is indeed a great force, morally and intellectually, in commerce and manufactures, as well as a great power considered in her geographical extensions and military prestige. The British Empire is a community of great empires, of which the latest, but by no means least interesting acquisition is, as said, the vast area, as large as Australia, seized upon by her within the last few years in Africa. A striking illustration of England's comparative commercial supremacy is found in the fact that more than two-thirds of the world's commerce through the Suez Canal is carried on under the British flag and in British bottoms. England is the great trader, the great banker, the great monopolist, the great colonizer, the great conqueror of the earth. What a picture of her colossal achievements is afforded in the mere grouping before the mind's eye of such children of her loins or brain as the United States, the Dominion of Canada, Australia, India, her new and vast African seizure, not including Egypt, and the countless islands of the sea over which floats the Cross of St. George as the sign manual of English supremacy.—Oswego Times.

Cheers for the Tall-ender.

The young men who stand at the foot of their classes in the graduating exercises now in progress in all the institutions of learning in the country need not fear the ordeal, after the experience of the tallender at West Point. We are told that when the first cadet in the class went up to receive his diploma the applause was generous and hearty, but when the name of the cadet who stood at the foot of the class was called the vast audience got on its feet and fairly yelled, and the adjutant-general shook his hand warmly and complimented him on getting through successfully. Oh, no, the jaglards need not despair.—Boston Herald.

OTTAWA'S TRIBUTE.

A Monument of Noble Dignity Perpetuates the Name of Sir John Macdonald.

The model for the Macdonald statue, which was unveiled at Ottawa on Dominion Day, was selected as the best work out of the 51 submitted. It is the work of Mr. Philippe Hebert, the Canadian sculptor. It possesses a noble dignity and simplicity fitting as a memorial to perpetuate the name

MACDONALD MONUMENT, OTTAWA. of the deceased premier. It represents Sir John Macdonald upon a somewhat elaborate pedestal, in the attitude of one addressing a public assemblage, his eyeglasses held between the thumb and finger of the right hand, a scroll in his left hand, and at his feet a pile of books and portfolios. The great coat is thrown back slightly from the shoulders, disclosing the long double-breasted frock coat beneath. The features are a good likeness. At the foot of the pedestal is seated a female figure representing Canada with her right hand upon the shield of the Dominion and in her left a furled flag.

ELECTRIC THIEF CATCHER.

Two Wires Baited With a Tempting Purse.

On the fifth floor of a large manufactory on the West Side of Chicago is a department employing a number of girls, who have been complaining for several months of thefts committed in their dressing room on the sixth floor while they were at work. Silk handkerchiefs, veils and money disappeared from time to time with increasing frequency, until the management began to realize that it was time steps were taken to detect the thief. As the dressing room was kept locked, the key being accessible only to those employed in the department where the losses were reported, it was decided that one of the girls using the room was rifling the pockets of the others.

Accordingly, a trustworthy girl was taken into the confidence of the management, a double wire was sewed in the lining of her cloak, connecting a spring jaw in the pocket with the two hooks on which the cloak hung. The jaws were placed in contact with one of the wires and insulated from each other by a small tongue of leather placed between them while forced apart, and this tongue was sewed to the bottom of a purse. Each of the two hooks (which were of brass) supporting the garment was held in place by a long brass screw which went through the partition and connected with a wire on the outside of the dressing room. Here the wires were carried along under a moulding, through the floor, to a single cell battery, and a bell, placed in series, were hidden in the room where the girls were at work, 50 feet away. A switch was placed in a convenient position, which broke the circuit, until the other arrangement were completed. After closing the switch the only opening in the circuit was at the spring jaws, which would be brought together by removing the purse and insulating tongue. The trap had been set but three hours when the bell rang, and the owner of the cloak hurried to the room, where the garments were kept and there found the guilty girl; and upon this evidence the girl was immediately accused and discharged, after she had admitted her guilt.—Western Electrician.

It is proposed to build a railroad from Port Said, at the mouth of the Suez Canal, across Northern Arabia, through Persia and Beloochistan, to Kurrachee, India, a distance of 2,400 miles, at a cost of $75,000,000.

What She Lacks.

Score one for the old-fashioned woman! She has a sphere of usefulness from which the new woman is barred. She cannot ride a bicycle so well, possibly, but that is not a particularly useful accomplishment, no matter how much enjoyment there may be in it. And to offset that the old-fashioned woman has given an illustration of something she can do that is nearly as far beyond the new woman as it is beyond man.

A boy in New York fell through the opening in a fire-escape landing at the fifth floor; an old-fashioned woman was sitting on the steps below. The child caromed on the coping over the doorway and landed in the woman's lap. That saved his life, and beyond a bruise as the result of striking the coping he was unharmed.

Of course, the question immediately arises: Of what use would a man have been under such circumstances? Clearly none. He has no lap. And of what use would a new woman in bloomers have been? Just as little, and for the same reason.—Chicago Evening Post.

A Good Excuse.

When the French troops were in Mexico during the days of Maximilian a private soldier was brought before General Geningros, who was in command at Monterey.

"You are charged with having stolen the golden slipper from the foot of the Virgin in the cathedral," said the General sternly.

"I didn't steal it," replied the soldier.

"But the slipper was found in your knapsack."

"I know it was, but I didn't steal it."

"How, then, did it come in your possession?"

"The Virgin gave it to me."

"How so?"

"You know, General, how she sits there with one foot over the other, sticking out a little?"

"Well?"

"She didn't tell me to take the slipper, but she held out her foot as if she was saying, 'Take the slipper if you want it,' so I took it, more as a matter of accommodation than anything else."

Mrs. Beardsley, the mother of the artist Aubrey Beardsley, is a gentle, old-fashioned English lady, who lives entirely for her son and his beautiful young sister. They keep house together in South Kensington, London, and his mother entertains his set with great hospitality. She is sure her son is the greatest genius of the age, but people who know him say he does not take himself so seriously, and that he is a very nice boy.

The World's Population.

The entire population of the globe is upwards of 1,400,000,000, of whom 35,214,000 die every year; 95,000 every day; 4020 every hour; 67 every minute and one and a fraction every second. On the other hand the births amount to 37,792,000 every year; 100,800 every day; 4200 every hour; 70 every minute, and one and a fraction every second.

Cats in a Tree.

Do cats often live in trees? Two cases are recorded—one recently and the other in the summer of 1891. The latter was in St. James' Park, London, when a stray cat made a nest in a tree, some forty or fifty feet from the ground, and her kittens were seen to be disporting themselves in the branches like so many squirrels.

The Shades of a Carnation.

As a flower giving greatest diversity in shades of color the carnation is perhaps unique, having flowers of a self or single color in pure white, lemon, yellow, buff, terra-cotta, pink, rose, crimson, brilliant, scarlet, red, maroon, brown, bluish-purple, gray and all intermediate shades.

The Newmarket Race Course.

At Newmarket race course there are two courses, the long and the round. The first is 4 miles and about 380 yards—i. e., 7,420 yards. The second is 6,640 yards. Childers, the swiftest horse ever known, has run the first course in seven minutes and a half, and the second in six minutes and forty seconds; which is at the rate of more than 49 feet in a second.

The Growth of a Lion.

When a young lion reaches the age of two years he is able to strangle or pull down a horse or an ox, and so he continues to grow and increase in strength till he reaches his eighth year, when he grows no more. For 20 years after his fangs and talons show no signs of decay, but after that he gradually becomes feeble, and his teeth fall him.

Australia's Strange Moths.

Australia does not possess many butterflies, but it has many varieties of moths. Wonderful creatures are some of these, which, at best, so exactly resemble a withered leaf that you would never suppose them to be anything else unless you chanced to see them move, which they are very careful not to do while you are looking on.

Dangers of Mountain Climbing.

Mountain climbing in Switzerland was attended last summer with an unusual number of accidents. Since July 1 there were 52 deaths and 13 cases of serious injury. These figures do not include four climbers who disappeared, leaving no trace behind them, and who probably have also been killed.

CHAPTER XXX.
A LOAN CALLED IN.

Russell's campaign had cost Gilbert Ray quite a sum of money, but he did not take the result hardly. On the contrary he declared that he had had fun enough out of the affair to more than compensate him. And he proceeded to go on much more as he could by making game of Russell, who was exceedingly sensitive on the subject.

Motor stock was falling by this time, and Russell could have considered himself a rich man, except that his interest was a mere loan payable to Deering, the inventor, on demand. This fact was known only to the two parties to the agreement, and so Russell could take what comfort he could get out of the knowledge that he was generally supposed to be on the highway to prosperity. In reality it made his position doubly dangerous. Living constantly beyond his means, he now saw himself surrounded by opportunities for borrowing. His personal note was considered good by those who knew—or thought they knew—his connection with the Motor Company.

Deering remained a mystery to Russell. In their conversations, which were not frequent, the inventor expressed no gratitude for what Russell had done in developing the motor. He seemed to think that all the credit was due to the machine, and to be continually suspicious lest justice might not be done to this creature of wheels and pinions. Russell believed more than once that the inventor was on the point of claiming possession for some violation of the honesty contract. It would have been useless to resist such a claim, for the two years during which their agreement was to run were now drawing rapidly toward their end.

Reflecting upon the approach of that time, Russell became more deeply despondent than ever. He could form no plans. He had made no valuable connections except his acquaintance with Ray, and he was resolved not to seek any more favors at his hands. To suppose he was never tempted to end his financial troubles by seeking a marriage with Alice Ray, who was rich in her own right without regard to her father's millions, would be to imagine a better man than Russell. He was surrounded by men who would have regarded such an alliance as the last possibility in the way of good fortune, who thought of marrying for money as a business against which nothing could be said except that it was difficult. But Russell had never ceased

It has appeared to some men that an attempt to turn over a new leaf was a signal never neglected by the spirit of malevolence. Russell had often experienced this sensation. And now, when he had hope that the time allowed him, though short, would suffice to enable him at least to free himself from pecuniary obligations, came the crowning misfortune of all. Deering demanded the invention. He accused Russell of certain manipulations of the stock for which, in reality, Ray was responsible. Deering said that such operations would ruin the company, and he intimated that such was the intention, in order that the interest which would soon revert to him might be cheaply purchased.

In vain Russell endeavored to show him the true state of the case. The man was as hard as a cast-steel pinion in his own machine.

DEERING DEMANDED THE INVENTION. He would take the matter into the courts. Russell had no heart for such a contest. He promised that in a week's time he would deliver over all his title and his books, and with this promise Deering grudgingly consented to be satisfied.

And so Russell was brought face to face with his destiny. If it had come naturally at the time which he had kept in mind, he might have met it with resignation, but this hurry of fate seemed like a personal injury, and it embittered him. In this emergency his mind turned to Alice, and gently as he had often thought of her in their last days when his better impulses were awakened, and all seemed traceable to her, but in a way of which he was inwardly ashamed. He thought of her as a means of escape from his troubles. He withdrew into a wretched corner of his own soul, and counted her money, like a miser who knows the love of it to be a sin, but can not shake himself free of it. Death had removed his obligation to his friend. He fixed his eyes upon this little myth and did not see the great falsity of his position when he should offer a love that was half covetousness.

A thousand sophistries rose to his aid, and helped him overthrow the weakness of his resolution. He had loved her for her self; he would strive all his life to make her happy; if she loved him what did the motive of his proposal matter?

counterfeited the emotion which I am now struggling to suppress. I should have met, no doubt, the contempt which I deserved, but which I hope to escape by asking you no more than to bid me a fair good-bye, and to think of me as trying to deserve the very small share in your kindly remembrance which is all I dare to hope for."

Alice had preserved the semblance of composure during most of this conversation, but there is something in the word good-bye which strikes straight at a woman's heart, if she loves. And Alice loved Russell. There will be no mystery with the reader on that point. She saw the serious purpose in his looks, and the tears blinded her eyes. She sank into a chair and covered her face. Russell saw the sign, and he was overwhelmed with consternation.

"I am a brute to have grieved you so," he exclaimed. "I was a madman to have come here at all, bringing my miserable story of weakness and irresolution to your ears."

He began to pace the room, but as he approached the door, she looked up, hastily crying: "Oh, please, not yet; I have much more to say."

"Alice, what do these tears mean? Is it possible that you have thrown away your heart upon so poor a creature as I am?"

"Don't talk so of yourself. It is possible. It has been true I can't say how long, and I thought—"

Russell groaned aloud.

"If there were any possible atonement, but what can I do? I could promise a hundred reformations. I could picture a dozen ways of life in every one of which I should certainly fail."

"My father does not think so of you. What have you done to make you so hopeless of yourself?"

"For two years I have led a life wholly artificial, which, as I look back upon it, seems to have contained no act that was better than half-honest. Part of it, I admit, has been up to the standard of the ethics of business, and when I say that another part has fallen below that standard, I use language which could hardly be stronger. There is this that I may say: I have so arranged my affairs that I can right every financial wrong that I have done, but I shall have nothing left. The two sides of the account balance with an accuracy that is little short of miraculous. But when I have done that, I shall have nothing—certainly, I shall have neither courage nor opportunity to begin any life but the dullest of salaried drudgery."

"My father—"

"Has already been too kind. I could not permit him to help me. Come, Alice, say good-bye. The time has come."

"William Russell, I have confessed to you the most intimate secret of a woman's heart. If you now tell me that your poverty must when nothing could be said except that it was difficult. But Russell had never ceased to regard such a thought as a treachery to his friend. He could not help thinking now and then that Alice had improved wonderfully during the two years since Brown went away. She had developed more rapidly than even the man who loved her could have hoped. "If Brown attributes any part of that to me," thought Russell, "he will overwhelm me with mistaken gratitude."

In the last days of winter, when such thoughts as these were often in Russell's mind, there came to him a startling piece of news. He took a morning paper from his desk one dry with no intention of reading it; he was thinking only to lay it aside and make room for something else. But as he held it in his hand a dispatch not four lines long seemed to stare at him out of the page more conspicuously than all the large type and screaming headlines. It announced that Walter Brown, in the employ of the—company which had been engaged in operations in Central Africa, had died of fever in Cape Town on his way home.

Within an hour, and before Russell had fairly come to realize what he had read a man who had known Brown well came in to tell the news. He, too, had seen the item. They spoke together kindly of the dead, and in a moment Russell was left alone. He was sincerely grieved. In thinking of the character of Brown as he had often done since their memorable conversation, he had come to have a higher appreciation of his genuine good qualities than he had ever felt when they were together. He had looked forward with pleasant anticipations to Brown's return, in spite of the thoughts that would come when the face of Alice entered into such fancies.

Evidently it was his duty now to carry the news to her. He closed his desk, and took a train up-town at once. The unusual hour and the serious look in Russell's face alarmed Alice at once. She feared that some mishap had befallen her father. When she learned the truth, she expressed great sorrow and spoke with deep feeling of her high opinion of the man whose career had been cut off so suddenly. But there was something in her words which made Russell's heart beat strangely. Surely not this would she have heard what he had told her if she had ever loved or could have loved his friend.

The following days brought no new facts regarding the death of Brown, except a general confirmation of the report. There was no ground for hope, and Russell reflected sadly that he had lost a friend in the hour of his utmost need.

For all things were not well with him. He had been making a strong effort to stem the tide, and could make some headway, but the time was short, and the debts which must be met were heavy and pressing. However, he had had a good fortune in one or two investments recommended by Ray, and with care might hope to make an even showing in his personal accounts before long. But after that, what? He did not know; and, if the truth must be told, at times he did not care. Yet now and then the life he had been leading, with its luxury and leisure, would take hold upon him. True, he had found little satisfaction in it, but could he not do better with a longer opportunity? He shuddered to think of a return to the monotonous existence he had led two years before, and yet, in all his pondering on the problem which confronted him, he was conscious of a feeling that all things were uniting to push him back into the old way. At such times he would remember the wish he had made to borrow this luxurious life for two years, and the thought that he should be ready to deliver it up when the time expired. Had that wish been granted, and was the creditor, fate, to call him to a speedy account? He hoped he might be ready to meet the de-mander nappy; if she loved him would did the motive of his proposal matter? Thus he reasoned, but in reality a fear of poverty was stronger than love; his steps were urged by cowardice when he turned them toward her. Well, it was not the first time that the little winged god had had to stop his ears to shut out the jingle of gold.

CHAPTER XV.
LOVE'S WORD IS LAW.

When Russell stood in the presence of Alice Ray the various sophistries by which he had persuaded himself that he had a right to ask her to be his wife, took their proper shapes like so many hideous genii at the touch of the good enchantress in the old stories of the East. He saw that they were hollow and false; he saw himself, too, for what he was.

There was an honest vein of romance in his nature. He had often dreamed—without the hope of realization, as the blind dream of seeing—that he should some day stand before a woman he could love, offering her the services of his life, the love of his whole heart, and asking in return what all men hope to win but few deserve. The hour for such pleading had come; and Alice—he had never framed a fancy half so worthy. And yet how different was the scene from all that he had pictured. He shuddered at the thought of offering his wretched heart to her.

A woman seldom lacks a premonition when a moment such as this has come. Alice saw Russell stand staring at her without speaking; she marked the intensity of his gaze and the pallid excitement in his face. She was much disturbed, and yet she waited for his words with an appearance of calmness.

"Alice," said he, "the life I have been leading fills me with disgust. I want to change it for something better."

"I hope, in deed, you may," said Alice, "if it has failed to satisfy you."

"It has failed in a hundred ways," he replied. "It has failed to give me peace of mind or liberty. I have been the slave to it. It has failed of any good object except one, which I now see was far too high—was never to be reached by any path that I have found."

"Get into the better path at once, then," said she, smiling. And then gravely: "I think, perhaps, you have not been in the right road during the last year. Forgive my saying so; we have been—we are—very good friends, and it has given me pain to see that you have been unhappy. I have seen far less of you than formerly, but it has been enough to show me that you were careworn and weary. A great many young men grow old very fast in these days, and I have feared that you would be one of them."

"I feel as if I were old. Perhaps it is because I have lived two lives already, and have made failures of them both. You know that before I met you I had for seven or eight years led the most monotonous existence ever endured by mortal man, outside a prison. I thought that there was happiness in blind routine, but one day I awoke to find that it was misery. Then, in a wild determination, I threw myself into a life, of the most restless activity. That has burned itself out, and I hardly know what remains."

"There remains the middle path," said Alice. "Many wise men have thought it the best."

"I fear I can not walk in it," said Russell, sadly. "It requires caution which I have lately thrown away, and a faculty of rational hoping, which I do not think I ever possessed. Moreover, the middle path in these days can hardly be said to exist. It is overgrown, because so few travel in it. If I give up my present life, I must go back to poverty, and that means isolation."

"It means no isolation as far as we are concerned," said Alice, warmly. "Whatever life you choose our doors will be always open to you."

"Alice, they must be forever closed to me. The reason, I will not insult your intelligence by pretending to conceal. You read it in my face, as I can read the knowledge of it in yours. I love you; and you know it; and you also know a thousand reasons why I should not say it."

"I know not one," said Alice, in a voice that struggled to be calm, "if it be true."

"It is all the truth I know. It has been the one elder certainty in a myriad of chimeras. It has been the influence that has kept the little good in me alive to fight its lost battle with the evil. If I had not loved you, I should have come here to-day and asked you in set phrases to be my wife. I should have separate us because I am rich, you do me a deep injustice. If your past has not been all it should, I, at least, have confidence in your future, and I am willing to wait till it develops what I know lies in it."

Russell was only a man, and rather a weak one after all, as has appeared. He was not proof against the beauty and the love of this sweet girl. He took her in his arms with a tenderness that reverence exacted of passion, and kissed away her tears, though he did not confine his attention wholly to the source of them.

"I dare not ask you to wait," said he, releasing her, at last; "I can not find a hope to share with you. I can plead no more than my most deep sincerity. I can promise only such endeavor as my weakness has often made to fail, though never with such inspiration as has come to me in your love."

CHAPTER XVI.
THE END OF BORROWED YEARS.

It was May again. Russell had spent some days in putting his affairs in order. And now he had paid his last loan, and had come to the end of such business as had occupied him. He had no prospects; no money; nothing to do. He found himself by chance at noon upon the very spot where he had stood, and thought for the first time that a life of activity in the pursuit of money might have some interest. He had tried it. The two years he had asked for had been granted him, and they were ended. It was the twelfth of May.

He had taken from the interview with Alice some fresh hopes, which had all faded now. Courage to renew the battle would not come at his call. He even meditated ending it by his own hand, as he had thought of doing two years before. As to his love he was filled with the insane idea that that, too, had been lent to him and had gone, with the years, beyond recall.

He stood in a doorway, looking out upon Wall street, but seeing nothing of the hurrying throng, until at last he was conscious that one face, not moving like the others but standing immovably, was growing clear upon his vision out of the general confusion. He looked again; it was the face of Walter Brown.

There could be no doubt about it; the wanderer had returned—returned from the grave it almost seemed, for months had passed since Russell had believed him dead. Yet there he stood talking with an acquaintance whom he had stopped at the edge of the pavement.

"I did not meet him; I can not look him in the face," murmured Russell, and he turned hastily to lose himself in the crowd. He nearly ran into the arms of Gilbert Ray.

"Hold on my boy," said the man of millions, grasping Russell's arm. "I haven't had a talk with you in many a day, and I've got something almighty important to say. Come to my office at once."

He dragged Russell away in spite of all resistance.

"In the blues again, I see," said Ray, as soon as they were seated in the office. "Well, so are your friends when they view your conduct. What did you mean by letting that lunatic, Deering, cut you out of every thing in that way? I know what you'll say. The invention was his; you deceived me—and all that. Of course you did, and mighty shrewdly too. I don't care a cent about that. I've more than got my money back out of the motor already, and I'd have had a million for us two if that fool hadn't stepped in to ruin his own prospects and yours. For, mind you, although his machine is a good thing, it can't sell itself; and he is such an uncommonly queer sort of fellow that he never can do any thing with it. I'm done, of course, as soon as you step out, and the consequence is that Deering will be just where he started from in no time."

"I am sorry for it," said Russell; "he is an honest man and has a home of which anybody could be proud. I have seen him in it."

"Well, that's neither here nor there," continued Ray. "I've heard about your square."

THAT ACHING HEAD.

What Causes It and How Overcome.

How often the remark, "Oh, my head aches," and there are so many varieties of aches and pains the head is subject to all along the line from the dull and heavy and oppressed feeling over the eyes to the persistent, racking and torturing misery of Sick Headache. The cause is in most cases the same, the overflow of poisonous uric acid is not extracted from the blood by the Kidneys, and accumulating in the blood, causes high and irregular pulse, headaches, mental depression and nausea. ing up accounts and putting every dollar you've got into your debts. Now, that sort of thing I really can't approve of. If it should spread, it would ruin the street. But, that's not to be feared, although I know the malady's contagious. I knew it, because I've caught it myself. There's a little debt, almost thirty years old, which I'm going to pay to-day. Do you remember your father?"

"My father," said Russell, startled by the question. "I can scarcely say I do. He died when I was a little boy."

"Well, I remember him. I know him here in this city. He was a good man, but not too sharp in business. He had accumulated some money, but he lost most of it at the last."

"I knew that," said Russell; "I felt the effects of it during my boyhood. What he left sufficed only for my bringing-up, and for such education as I have."

"Did you—that is, you didn't actually want for anything?" asked Ray, moving uneasily in his chair, while he regarded the young man anxiously.

"No; I had food, and clothes, and shelter. The things I wanted no money could supply. They were ideals, far too high for me."

Ray seemed relieved.

"The truth is," said he, "that if your father hadn't known me, he might have kept his money. Now don't be alarmed; I didn't exactly rob him. We were on opposite sides of a little business affair. One of us had to go down, I was going up, just at that time; persistently going up and nothing could stop me. He had a strong tendency in the other direction. Perhaps some of my methods at that time were a little—well, not what so vigorous a moralist as you would approve of. I have thought of that affair once or twice myself, and not just easily, though it was all in the game."

"I don't understand you," said Russell coldly.

"Don't, my dear boy, don't use that tone of voice. It makes me feel badly. I'm glad I decided to do this thing."

"What is it?"

"Why, you see, the amount your father lost in that little deal with me was about $12,000. I've kept the account, and I'd had it in my mind to look you up before I threw you in my way. I was glad to know you were; treble glad to see how you and Alice were getting

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Fly nets for horses are a profitable investment to the farmer.

There is no excuse for keeping poor fowls, when a good flock can be secured at a small outlay.

Growing a mass of fat in the shortest time possible is not all that is necessary to make a pig profitable.

Wrap every fowl for a private customer in a pure white napkin and let the buyer remove it and return it with the pay.

It is reported that at recent sales in Kentucky of standard-bred horses and Jersey cows, the cows averaged $5 more per head than the horses.

When the hot sun pours down by and by on the pasture think how pleasant a little shade will be for the flock. A few spreading trees or a few rough sheds for the sheep to shelter under will be a relief to them under their heavy woollen coats. These little things go a great way to insure success with the flock.

In grazing or feeding sheep, the shepherd should always remember that variety is essential to the highest success. Sheep are fastidious enough to tire of long grazing in the same field on one kind of herbage, or feeding at the rack or trough on a single variety of grain or hay. Variety in grazing and feeding is health to the flock and profit to the owner.

In estimating the cost of feeding a flock, either on dry food or pasture, the rule may be taken that the sheep will live as well as may be desired on one-third less food in proportion to live weight as any other animal. Thus, if a cow or steer needs 30 pounds of food daily for its subsistence for 1,000 pounds live weight, the same weight of sheep may be sufficiently fed on 20 pounds of food. This is one of the reasons why sheep are the most profitable of all the domestic animals.

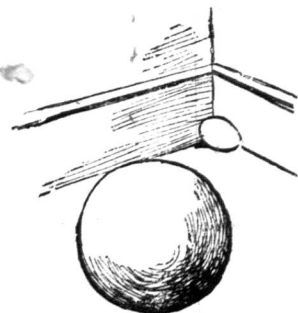

It is believed by some persons that a young animal may be starved and stunted by insufficient feeding, but later will make up for this loss by better feeding and care. This is wholly contrary to science and fact, if not to reason and common sense. The condition of any young animal is like time—what is lost can never be regained afterwards. Then it is the business of the shepherd to push on the lambs from the day they come into the world, first through the ewe, and then by direct feeding.

In these days, when horses are cheaper than they have ever before been known, it is not the original cost of working teams, but the burden of keeping them, that makes the hardest problem for the farmer. It is, indeed, now a stronger temptation than ever to provide too little team help, for if the horses cost less originally there is greater difficulty in disposing of them when their use lessens. Little as they may cost, no one likes to give away his teams when for months there may be no use for them, nor does it pay to kill them, as did Mayor Pingree of Detroit, last fall, when he found in the city stables a number of horses used during the summer, but not worth the cost of keeping through the winter.

A certain magician held up before his audience an egg and a cannon ball, and after expatiating on the strength of a perfect arch, and, still more, of a perfect dome, remarked that few people know how strong an egg is.

Opposite the stage station and hotel was a shanty with a sign of "Jale" over the door, and I strolled over there and asked of a man sitting at the door and smoking a pipe:

"Can I take it that this is the County Jail?"

"You kin, sir," he promptly replied.

"Not much of a jail."

"No, sir; but it's a new county, you know."

"Any prisoners inside?"

"No, sir. I'm the only prisoner, and they allow me outside."

"Where's the sheriff or jailor?"

"Gone off hunting."

"And left you alone?"

"All alone. I'm purty comfortable, however, and my time will be out in about six months."

"But I should think you'd run away," I said, as I offered him a cigar.

PERHAPS

Some day someone somewhere will make

How you and Alice were getting on now I'm quadruply miserable to see you give up every thing and go mooning round the streets, as if you couldn't decide whether to drown yourself in the East river or the Hudson. Now, what I want to do is to restore that money to you. It isn't much; it won't affect me in the least financially; but it will make me feel a great deal better in my mind. It will give you a chance to go off and take a pleasure trip. You need one badly. I had thought to make the money a present to you on a certain very interesting occasion, but it can't wait. I don't believe in hanging on till Christmas with a barrel of flour for a poor man who may starve during the fall. Russell, here's my check. Don't let any foolish scruple prevent your taking it. It's yours, and I feel in giving it as if you were my own son."

The world spun round before Russell's eyes. It was not the idea of the money, but of what its possession would give him. As to his right to it he had very little doubt. If the events had been of such a nature as to weigh upon the business conscience of Gilbert Ray, perhaps it would be better for the old gentleman's soul to relieve it of a burden such as that.

"Mr. Ray," said he, "I ought to tell you Alice—"

"I know all about it, my boy. You have had my consent and her mother's for many a day."

"I would take this money," said Russell, rising excitedly, "for, though I thank you deeply, I will not feign to doubt that it is rightfully mine. Some rumor of that old story must have reached me, for I find that it is not new to me, though your name was never connected with it. I would take this money, as I have said, and I would also accept the priceless gift your daughter offers me, but there is something between us. Mr. Ray, I was made to know her by my friend who loved her. I thought him dead when I made my mad confession to her. To-day I have seen him alive. How shall I face him having stolen the love he coveted, the prize he worked for in the heat of Africa, braving a separation for her sake?"

"I don't know," said Ray, looking up from a card which a boy had brought him, "but you might try it in advance. The man is here."

And he handed Russell a card which bore the name of Walter Brown. A minute later the owner of that name entered the room. Russell would have turned away, but Brown came forward, grasping his hand.

"Dear old fellow," he exclaimed, "why don't you speak to me? Do you think I'm a ghost? That seems to be the prevailing impression among the men I've met to-day. It all grows out of the fact that there was another Walter Brown with the company, but he had a middle name which I haven't. It seems the papers omitted to state it. 'I can't look you in the face,' said Russell; 'I have been false to you.'

"CONSOLE YOURSELF, MY GOOD FRIEND," HE SAID.

"What does he mean?" asked Brown, turning in surprise to Ray.

"He means that he had been falling in love with my daughter," said Ray, dryly. Brown laughed.

"Console yourself, my good friend," he said, pressing Russell's hand again. "I was married in Cape Town to the sweetest woman in the world."

A Question of Comfort.

"I should think," remarked Mr. Lushforth, "that a woman would be clear miserable carrying around those swelled sleeves."

"They are not half so uncomfortable as a swelled head," said Mrs. L. in so sweet a tone that he deemed it wise to close the discussion.—Cincinnati Tri-that one, could break it with the cannon ball. The accompanying illustration shows how he did it. Snuggly ensconced in a corner of the room, it was safe from all the attacks of the ball, for the sides of the wall gave it absolute protection.

The Pink Wild Rose.

An old log house in the pasture stands, Shattered, forsaken and brown. Its windows gone, its broken door

And its doorstep tumbled down; But a spirit lingers near the spot

With a sweet, old-time repose, For in the tangled masses round about Blossoms the pink wild rose. I gather a bunch of the fragrant flowers, And a picture seems to rise; I stand in the past a hundred years

And see 'neath the sunset skies The housewife stands by her spinning

Wheel. Telling at twilight close;

An old brown jar on the window sill Is filled with the pink wild rose.

The husband sits on the doorstep there, With the children playing near,

And then time marches with silent tread.

Till it passes year by year, And the old log house deserted is,

A prey to the rains and snows, While the only voice of the days gone by Is the voice of the pink wild rose.

Americans in Paris.

The man without a country was no more unfortunate than they. It is true they have Henry's bar, where they can get real American cocktails, and the Travelers', where they can play real American poker; but that is as near as they ever get to anything that savors of our country, and they do not get as near as that towards anything that savors of the Frenchman's country. They have their own social successes, and their own salons and dinner parties, but the Faubourg St.-Germain is as strange a territory to many of them as though it was situated in the heart of the Congo Basin.—Harper's.

Catarrh in the Head

Is a dangerous disease because it is liable to result in loss of hearing or smell, or develop into consumption. Read the following:

"My wife has been a sufferer from catarrh for the past four years and the disease had gone so far that her eyesight was affected so that for nearly a year she was unable to read for more than five minutes at a time. She suffered severe pains in the head and at times was almost distracted. About Christmas, she commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and since that time has steadily improved. She has taken six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and is on the road to a complete cure. I cannot speak too highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I cheerfully recommend it." W. H. Here is a fish story from Goderich: "Last fall a gentleman fishing on the Maitland loth is gold watch over the boat from which he was fishing. The other day he caught a three pound bass. His astonishment can be imagined when he found his watch in the throat of the beauty. The watch was running and the time correct. It being a stem winder, the supposition is that in masticating its food the fish wound up the watch daily.

Gananoque is to have a new two story high school. The materials used will be Don Valley pressed brick, with limestone basement and trimmed with terra cotta, and moulded brick. It will contain five class-rooms, library, teachers' rooms, two cloak-rooms and a large assembly hall. It will have an entry for the teachers, one for boys and one for girls, and will be heated by steam and ventilated by means of fans. The lavatories, lunch and recreation rooms will be in the basement, as will also be the furnace and boiler.

A good story is told of a barber in an eastern Ontario village who was recently converted by the Hornerites. It was pointed out to him that it was his duty to interest himself in the souls of his customers. Next morning his first customer was a nervous looking stranger, who noticed the barber's preoccupied manner. The latter was put on, and he strapped the razor, the barber, who was evidently struggling between inclination and duty muttered to himself: "Will I do it? I don't like to, but I guess I will have to." Fortified by this resolution he turned quickly towards his customer and inquired: "My friend, are you prepared to die?" The nervous gentleman in the chair waited no longer. With a yell that would have done credit to a Comanche brave, he bounded from the chair and out of the shop with towels, lather and all. The barber has since resolved not to inquire about the souls of his customers until they have been shaved.—Morrisburg Herald.

A Surfeit of Troughs.

By the visit of the circens, Belleville and Kingston have had all the pick pockets and fakirs they will want for the next few years. In Kingston a lady had her pocket picked, and a man whom she claims to be the thief was captured. The crowning act was the capture of a satchel from the safe of Mr. Nesbitt, which was placed there by a circus ticket seller. The satchel contained $300. It was found in the porch of a vacant house in the city, but the money was gone. In Belleville some four or five were captured. The prisoners in each place were remanded for a week. In Kingston a woman went to the circus ticket office and presented $5. The ticket seller claimed the bill to be no good, and as the lady thought, handed it back to her, but a policeman standing by told her to examine the bill and upon doing so found it to be $1. The policeman made the genial (?) ticket seller "deliver up" which he did along with two free tickets for the circus, but she would not take the comps.

The Bicycle Meet.

The committee have arrangements completed for the bicycle meet on Monday next. Many of the best riders in Ontario and northern New York have entered, and some exciting races will take place. Some of those who are coming are, McIntosh (5 mile champion), Wells, McKellar, Davidson, H. and W. Hultz, McLeod (class B champions), Gibbons and others from Toronto, and Smith from Oswego. There have been six entries from Kingston, five from Picton, one from Galt, one from Smith's Falls, three from Belleville, and others yet to hear from. It is expected that there will be some five or six tandem riders here. There will probably be four or five hands here with excursions. A hard times parade will be held in the morning at 11 o'clock, which will be worth coming miles to see. In the evening a grand concert will be held in the opera house, when the prizes will be awarded. The Fostelle Concert Co., of Cleveland, will be present and assist in the programme. Mayor Stevens will occupy the chair.

Two tandem teams will pace in the five mile race and all the class B results.

A Fatal Blow.

On Thursday of last week Wm. Castell, a butcher of Elginburg died at his home as a result of a blow on the head from a base ball bat struck by R. Wycott of Odessa. Father McWilliams' Picnic was held on the day previous at Mace's Point, and in the afternoon the baseball clubs of Odessa and Elginburg played a game for $5 a side. During the day Castell had a quarrel with Wycott. During the game Wycott was about to strike the ball when Castell saw him. He placed himself on the line over which Wycott would likely run if he struck the ball, and threatened to injure the player. He told the pitcher he would not strike the ball while Castell was in the way. When Castell saw that Wycott was determined to stand on the home plate, he threw off his coat and ran towards Wycott intending to strike him. Wycott swung the bat and struck Castell over the forehead. The men clinched and a fight ensued, during which Castell tore the shirt off Wycott and caught him by the throat. The men were separated and Castell was led away. He did not complain much about his head, and friends took him to a spring and washed his face and head. He then went to Switzer's hotel, where he went to sleep. From there he was taken to his home in Elginburg and allowed to sleep in the wagon on the way. He was unconscious when he reached the house and died at three o'clock next morning. A great many lay the blame on Castell, who acted most desperately. Several times he made assaults on Wycott, who luckily dodged the blows aimed at him. When he was driven into a fight he used the club in self defence. Castell was a fine athletic man, while Wycott was small in stature, but quick in action. An inquest was held and the Jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter against Wycott. He has been arrested and placed in jail at Kingston to await his trial at the fall assizes.

Robert Wycott was convicted of manslaughter before Judge Price, at Kingston on Wednesday for the killing of W. H. Castell but the Judge released him on suspended sentence.

Cricket.

On Monday our team visited Kingston and played their return match with the club of that city. Play commenced at 11 a. m. and ended before 4, the shortness of time being due to a combination of circumstances, viz.: the excellence of the bowling of both teams and the dampness of the ground, due to the previous rains. The batting of the teams was somewhat under the mark, only Messrs. White, Pierce and McLeod, of Kingston, and Merrett, Baines and F. Maybee of our team doing anything near what should have been done in that department. It is to be hoped, and should be looked for, that the young members, of which there are a goodly number on both teams and indeed in the whole district, should improve in their batting after taking part in and witnessing the excellent batting of some of the Chicago players during their recent trip. Batting at cricket is indeed a science, every ball coming through requiring its own particular treatment. It is not something that can be done haphazard with any success, but requires study, patience and practice to be successful at it, and there is no better way for the young players than to copy the form and style of the best players they chance to see and patiently work at it until they master it. The feature of the game on Monday was the smallness of Kingston's score in their second innings only five men of the eleven having touched the ball, and not one of those for more than three runs, the whole innings totalling only 12 runs, the smallest in the history of cricket in Kingston. Indeed Napanee did not do much better for with only nineteen runs to win it took five of her wickets to pull the game off. Messrs F. Maybee and Richardson doing the trick. Too much praise cannot be given to Messrs Merrett and F. Maybee for the excellence of their bowling, especially the latter who is as yet only a boy at it but bids fair to make his mark as an all round cricketer. The bowling of Galloway as it always is was excellent, and many a time throughout the game did he have the pleasure of seeing an outer stump fall. Pierce also bowled well for Kingston. The fielding of which there was not much to do on either side was up to the mark. Appended is the score.

A Pointer.

A veteran fisherman advises never putting a fish in water after it is dead, as nothing will tend to purify it quicker. If a fish is strung on a line wire when freshly caught and uninjured it will keep in water for a week, but once dead it should not be allowed to be even damp if possible, unless iced.

Great Attraction.

Everybody should remember August 12th and 13th and be sure to attend the Napanee races and see the grand exhibition to be given by the Myrtle Peak Company consisting of 10 trained horses. This special attraction has never exhibited in this section before and reflects great credit on the driving park officials in securing such an expensive high class entertainment.

Obituary.

On Sunday last about noon Miss Jane Tait died at her residence, Dundas street after a lingering illness. Something over a year ago deceased slipped on a banana peel on the side walk, and falling sustained injuries from which she never recovered. She was from near Centreville, and about twenty five years ago moved with her sister to Napanee where she conducted a dress making establishment. Deceased was an earnest christian worker, being connected with the Presbyterian church and was held in high esteem not only by the congregation but by all who knew her. The funeral took place on Tuesday, when her remains were buried in Camden.

Wire in Hay Objected to.

The Department of Agriculture is in receipt of information from Mr. Ebenezer Wells, of Croydon, England, to the effect that the system adopted by shippers of binding Canadian hay with wire, has led to losses among the live stock, to which it is fed. He states that seven or eight cases have been brought under his notice within the last six months, where horses and cattle have died from perforation, caused by swallowing pieces of wire with their food. Mr. Wells is anxious that the matter should be brought to the notice of Canadian agriculturists, with a view of remedying what he styles, in regard to our hay, "the only defect."

Laid at Rest.

On Friday last at the residence of Mr. E. Edwards, west Centre Street, Miss Elizabeth J. Way, daughter of Mr. W. Way, of Thurlow, died at the age of sixteen years after a short illness. She was a victim of consumption, and although marked for death she kept up with great courage, and was about the house up to within a few days of her death. Being of a kind and genial disposition she was beloved by all who knew her, and will be missed by her many young friends in town. The funeral took place on Sunday last from the residence of her uncle and proceeded to Thurlow, where a funeral sermon was preached by Rev. H. C. Garbutt after which her remains were laid to rest in the family plot.

Took Them in

On Saturday night last Chief Storms received word from the G. T. R. station that his services were required. He at once went up there and found a crowd about the residence of Mr. John McGuinness, who works the Gibson farm in north Napanee. James Richardson pointed out two men whom he wished the Chief to arrest, one of the party the Chief noticed as a man whom he had ordered out of town one day last week, but evidently had not gone. It was claimed that they had stolen from the premises of Mr. McGuinness. Both the men were placed in the lockup and on Monday were brought before James Daly, P.M. Mr. McGuinness swore that he had seen them for the past few days coming out of the big barn on the Gibson farm. They were sent up for thirty days.

Helped Himself to the Change.

On Friday night last some person gained an entrance to the Express Office by a back window and not finding anything in the printing department sufficient to satisfy his avaricious disposition, turned his attention to the book store, where he relieved the till of all the change, not leaving even an American cent. He did not think of sliding the tray for underneath it were some bills. He showed himself to be an amateur for he left the till open and the window up.

Painful Accident.

On Thursday last Mr. Fred Peterson met with a painful accident. He was assisting in the unloading of a cargo of coal at J. R. Dufosse's, and the work was completed about six o'clock. He started to come down from the tressel, which is about seventeen feet high, when a board which he was holding to become loose from the nail and he fell. Feeling himself going he turned and jumped thinking by this means he would save his life. He struck on the ground on his feet, but the distance of the descent was so great as to dislocate both ankles and break a small bone in the left leg.

A Sensation Story.

Mr. William Croskey, who lives near Westport, while returning home from attending the Prentice Boys' Lodge, near Bedford Mills, was apprehended by five masked men near Halladay's Corners. One of the gang caught his horse by the head and asked if he was a P. P. A. Mr. Croskey said he was not. He was then called a liar. They asked him who were P. P. A.'s, and his answer was, "I do not know." He was called a liar again. Several of the neighbors names were mentioned, and he was asked if they were members of the society. "I do not know," was his reply. He was told if he did not tell who were P. P. A.'s they would kill him. Mr. Croskey said, "Very well; if it is any satisfaction to you to kill me go on with the work." Finally the masked men let him proceed with a warning that if they ever caught him coming from a P. P. A. meeting they would kill him, and if they could find out what night they met they would burn the hall and all in it. This dastardly act has aroused the indignation of all classes around this section. The P. P. A.'s, who it is said number about 300 in one lodge, are in a high state of excitement.

Sweeping.

If there are any particularly dirty places on the carpet, it seems wise to take the small whisk broom and dustpan and sweep up those places first before beginning the general sweeping. Then we shall not have to sweep this additional dirt all over the carpet. After the sweeping is done and the dust allowed to settle a little, if the broom is dipped in clean cold water, all shaken out that can be, and the carpet then lightly brushed, the broom being dipped into fresh water every few moments, it will take up the surface dust that has fallen back on the carpet after being disturbed by the sweeping.

S. S. Break, superintendent of the Detroit railway has resigned. Mr. Break is a prominent church worker at his home at London, Ont., and resigned because as superintendent of the road, it would be necessary for him to make arrangements to carry crowds to Sunday-picnics and excursions. He prefers to live in Canada, where Sunday work is not allowed. He was getting $2,500 a year.

Brantford officials have adopted the system of killing dogs by electricity. Hereafter, all tagless dogs found running at large will be executed by electricity, at the back of the police station. The system has been tested and found to work very satisfactory. The animals are disposed of in an instant, apparently without pain.

A Boom to Horsemen.—One bottle of English Spavin Liniment completely removed a curb from my horse. I take pleasure in recommending the remedy, as it acts with mysterious promptness in the removal from horses of hard, soft or calloused lumps, blood spavin, splints, curbs, swellings, stifles and sprains. GEORGE ROBB, Farmer, Markham, Ont. Sold by W. S. Detroit.—46r.

Two Irishmen bought a little barrel of whisky in partnership to trade with at a fair. They agreed that neither should drink without paying. On the way one drank a glass and paid his partner three pence; the other then had a glass, and returned three pence. They kept up this alternation until, when they reached the fair, the whisky was all gone and they had honestly paid for every drink, and were bewildered to find that they only had three pence between them. We can state that this did not occur in Napanee.
